The molar volume of a substance is defined as its molar mass divided by its density: $v_m = M/\rho$. If the sample is a mixture containing N components, the molar volume may be approximated as the sum of the molar volume of its individual components, using the density of the mixture. $v_m = \sum v_i$. However, many liquid-liquid mixtures, for instance mixing pure ethanol and pure water, experience contraction or ...

Why do objects like wood float in water? Does it depend on size? Create a custom object to explore the effects of mass and volume on density. Can you discover the relationship? Use the scale to measure the mass of an object, then hold the object under water to measure its volume. Can you identify all the mystery objects?
