The drive home with Rey is less than amicable. She shoots daggers into my back the entire way and even more when I open the door for her, swatting at my helping hand. Heaving a sigh I follow her up the stairs to the door, she already has her key in the lock scrambling up the stairs getting as far away as she can.

There is a –darkness– that comes from too much light– that is the time to listen. The story of Abram and Hagar in Genesis 16 is an excellent example of listening to so-called good advice during a time of darkness, rather than waiting for God to send the light. When God gives you a vision and darkness follows, wait.
